

The Faith and Work Page

A resource for working Christians from ICF—UK

Christmas may seem a long way away, but now is the time to start planning and thinking if you are to hold a workplace Carol service. More and more companies are seeing the value of such events for the whole workforce. ICF has produced some basic guidelines to help Christians who want to arrange such an event.

Lord God, you called us to follow you and to be your witnesses in all situations
Help us to know that you are with us,
Dwelling in our midst even in those things that might not at first sight strike us as your concern.
Help us to find you in the everyday things so that we may reflect your love in the places where we live and work.

A Faith at Work Moment

It was supposed to be the annual pay negotiation, but for Simon McCauley, Managing Director of Anglo-Felt Industries it became a whole lot more. Simon made no secret of his Christian faith and the meeting provided the only opportunity for his colleague to share a matter that we deeply troubling her.

It was certainly not what he had anticipated, but Simon realised that there simply was no other space where individuals could share personal issues. He also realised that such matters have a significant impact on staff performance and morale. This was one of those early incidents that led to the eventual establishment of a highly effective chaplaincy at the company. If it wasn't for the pay talks it might never have happened.

ICF—Faith on Monday morning

