

The Faith and Work Page

A resource for working Christians from ICF-UK

This poignant image reflects what at first sight may seem an unlikely combination of symbols. The logo of Manchester United, not simply a giant in the world of football, but a massive corporate brand in its own right, and the sight of a Christian minister holding the scriptures behind lighted candles.

Club Chaplain and national director of SCORE sports chaplaincy recently led a service of remembrance at Old Trafford marking the 50th anniversary of the Munich air disaster in which many of the “Busby babes” were killed and injured.

The team, travelling from a cup tie in Belgrade, were simply doing their job, but like many came to realise that through our working lives we are exposed to many of life’s joys, hazards and tragedies. At such times faith is a defining presence, made known not only through Chaplains like John, but by Christians who have come to recognise their workplace as part of their vocation.
